INTRODUCTION.

THE Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland was formed in the year 1871 by the union of two Societies—The Ethnological Society of London (founded in the year 1843) and the Anthropological Society of London (founded in 1863). Each of these Societies issued publications under various titles, and this has necessitated the use of a considerable number of abbreviations in a general index, a full explanation of which is given in the following list. Since the union, the title of the periodical issued by the Institute has remained unchanged, viz., “The Journal of the Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland.” The first twenty volumes of this publication have been included in the present work.

With the first part of the first volume of the “Transactions of the Ethnological Society” were issued twelve pages entitled “Report of the Ordinary Meetings of the Ethnological Society”; these pages are numbered 129–140, and contain notices of the papers read at the meetings of the Society from November 25th, 1857, to December 21st, 1859, with abstracts of a few of those papers which are not printed at length in the “Transactions”; they were not included in the bound volume of the “Transactions,” the pagination of which is complete without them; the abstracts have been indexed, and the pages distinguished from the others having the same numbers by being placed in square brackets [129–140].

The Proceedings of the Anthropological Society of London were incorporated with a quarterly journal entitled “The Anthropological Review,” and, as this was issued to all members of the Society, it has been included in this index: the same remark applies to a periodical known as “The Popular Magazine of Anthropology,” which had an existence of one year only, and was bound in the same cover and issued with the numbers of the “Anthropological Review” for 1866 (vol. iv).

An error occurs in the pagination of the “Journal of the Anthropological Society” contained in the second volume of the “Anthropological Review," in which pages cclxiii-cclxxii are repeated; the second ten of these twenty pages are distinguished in the index by being printed in italics (cclxiii-cclxxii).

The pagination of the "Journal of the Anthropological Society of London" is continued from Nos. 28 and 29 of the "Anthropological Review" to the first two numbers of the "Journal of Anthropology"; but in No. 3 of the "Journal of Anthropology" the pagination of the "Journal of the Anthropological Society" recommences with page i.

In 1873 certain members of the old Anthropological Society of London founded the "London Anthropological Society," in connection with which a periodical was published entitled "Anthropologia." At the end of 1875 this Society was dissolved, and several of its members became members of the "Anthropological Institute." It has been thought well, therefore, to include a brief index to "Anthropologia" in the present volume; inasmuch, however, as the "London Anthropological Society" had no direct connection with the "Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland," the entries relating to Anthropologia have been printed in italics.

In the case of papers read before either of the Societies, the full title is given under the Author's name, together with information as to length, illustration, and the date of the meeting at which the paper was read, whenever that has been ascertained. In order to avoid complication and needless repetition, the dates of publication of the various volumes are not given in the body of the index, but are collected together in a table at the commencement.
